Dear Margie,

Two recent reports on hospice by the Health and Human Services Department's Office of the Inspector General are making the headlines. While some may say that the reporting is oversensationalized, a OIG third report "Identifying Potential Abuse or Neglect," demonstrates that the OIG's interest in safeguarding vulnerable populations has expanded to ALL Medicare services (you can read the attached report). In that light, it has probably never been more important for a board to be proactive in its role in ensuring that an effective compliance program is in place.

The Hospice Governance Academy has you covered...HGA's learning path on The Board's Role in Creating a Culture of Integrity includes this Spotlight Interview:

The Board's Key Roles in Compliance Gabe Imperato
